

FORE School of Management, New Delhi welcomes Class of 2020 with an inspirational Orientation Ceremony

FORE School of Management, New Delhi welcomed new students on campus with the Orientation Ceremony on 22 June 2018. The programme offered 360 new learners from 23 states an opportunity to get acquainted with batch mates, faculty members, the broad contours of their courses of study and, of course, the campus, which will be their second home for the next two years.

The B-School is known for its PGDM and PGDM – International Business programmes that attract students from different streams and diverse backgrounds. With the launch of its PGDM – Financial Management programme, FORE aims to meet the demand for highly skilled and trained professionals in investment management, banking, and financial services sectors. The first batch of the programme is up to its full capacity of 60.

On this special occasion, the new management recruits (43 per cent with prior work experience) were inspired by a number of speakers to make the best use of their time and realize their dreams. Dr. Subir Verma (Chair, Post Graduate Programme in Management) reminded the students, “We live in a VUCA world that is ‘Volatile, Uncertain, Complex, and Ambiguous’. To succeed, learning backed by innovation should be your prime agenda. And you also must focus on understanding technology.”

Speaking about the bigger picture, Dr. Jitendra K. Das (Director, FORE School of Management) urged the future leaders and entrepreneurs to help each other and work towards building a better society and country. Addressing a rapt audience, he said, “You must prove it to yourself. You need to be explorative, ask questions, and tell yourself, ‘I have given this time to myself to bring about that radical change.’”

On this high note students took the traditional pledge. Over the course of two years, they will endeavour to uphold the values of their institute and carry the legacy forward. In his speech Mr. R.C. Sharma (President, FORE School of Management) highlighted some of the values: “Be punctual and disciplined. You must find a purpose, strive to achieve it, and then learn to communicate it.”

Students were also made aware of the major features of their courses and the innovative pedagogy that will be followed in classrooms. The B-School focuses on industry trends and needs to create course curriculum. Like the one for the new PGDM – Financial Management programme. Carefully designed to make learners aware of the financial environment, especially markets, the programme will also offer insights into equity research, financial services, and investment banking.

But domain knowledge is only part of the learning students gain during their time here. The B-School emphasizes on the holistic growth of future managers. Focusing on this theme, Mr.

Gaurav Joshi (Director Asia Pacific at Bacardi Global Retail Travel and Alumnus, Batch 2000–02) said, “Look at the smaller pieces of the next two years, because they will help you change and grow. Focus on building your English and soft skills. Learn to get rid of the self-doubt and just get on with it.” With the Orientation Ceremony now behind them, that’s exactly what the students will aim to do in the coming days.
