Evidence-based Competency Assessment for Corporate and Researchers

INTRODUCTION

Competency is the most critical element for success in business which has been proven to be an important ingredient in the making of a performing workforce. Competence can broadly be defined as a concept that incorporates a variety of domains including knowledge, skills and attitudes. One of the challenges for both researchers and practitioners is to explore and demonstrate the relationship between competencies based management on firm performance. Adopting an evidence-based approach would help to accurately assess this relationship and in the ways that will be useful for both researchers and practitioners. Thus, dealing with competencies that is more evidence-based and empirical would provide impetus for HR practitioners to validate their activities as having an impact on business and encourages researchers (managers and scholars) to explore this relationship in varied contexts to contribute to effective practices.

OBJECTIVES

Competency is an underlying characteristic of an individual that is related to effective or superior performance in a given context. Despite endless talk about the need to develop “workplace competencies” and “mapping” them, most HR professionals from the corporate and academia find it challenging to assess and develop competencies in a meaningful and systematic way. Evidence-based competency assessment workshop aims to address both conceptual and practical questions related to competencies identification and assessment which are of fundamental importance to both researchers and managers. This workshop aims to impart training that would improve the credibility of the practices related to competency identification, assessment and development. The Workshop's would help the participants in learning to conduct more credible competency based enquiries, and in decision-making, interventions and applications.

CONTENTS

- Understand the essential tenets of competencies
- Link between key result areas, performance indicators and competencies.
- Competency identification and Assessment
- Tools and techniques.
- Research methodology behind the process
- Data analyses: analytical approach based on existing information, data, analytics and statistics.

METHODOLOGY

The program would be delivered through a combination of methods to help the participants gain insights essentially through activities, short-assignments and exercises, discussions, etc. Also, data sheets and practice sessions would be part of the workshop.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The workshop would be useful for HR professionals, Consultants, interested in assessing competencies and exploring potential areas-organizational & individual levels. Those involved in enhancing credibility of the enquiry in the field, consistent decision-making and HR interventions related with competencies. Faculty and Researchers who are interested to understand tools and techniques, and research methodology involved in competency-based research and/or management.
